ICE MAN

PERFORMED BY

AUBREY GRAHAM

A close-up photograph of a woman's face. Her right eye is heavily bruised and swollen, appearing dark and black. Her lips are painted a bright, glossy red. The background is a soft, out-of-focus yellow. A black rectangular box with white text is overlaid on the center of the image.

I SEE THE SNOW , AND I THINK OF YOU .

Technical images absorb the whole of history and form a collective memory going endlessly round in circles.

The camera creates pictures (images) from which so many descriptions (copies) of our lives can be produced and distributed.

The significance of images is marginal.

Apparatus improve by means of social functions.

The structure of the cultural condition is captured in the act of photography rather than in the object being photographed.

The division of photographs into channels is in no way simply a mechanical process but rather an encoding one. The distribution apparatuses reappropriate the photograph with the decisive significance for its reception.

To be in the photographic universe means to experience, to know and to evaluate the world as a function of photographs.

The camera will never be the province of all those who have their eye in the process of collecting all aspects of our lives, from one's private life to one's professional life, religion and ethics.
